

Dear staff of WGTK-FM,

When Dr. Campbell discussed the topic of an internship, she impressed on me that if the workers wanted me to make them coffee, then I should ask if they wanted sugar or creamer with it. Although my time spent at WGTK in Greenville entailed almost none of that, I believe that my internship experience has been worthwhile in several ways.

First, my time with Angelo was quite productive. (Okay, so I love being punny.) He showed me a little of how he managed the production order forms and broadcast agreement forms. I had the opportunity to give suggestions regarding voice over copy script, as well as to assist with editing of 30-second promos and spots as well as full-length broadcasts, and more.

Second, photography being one of my hobbies, I was also glad to help with taking photos, especially since Dibet mentioned before my interview with Joey that the station could use some help with social media. I did not expect, however, before looking into doing the internship interview, that I would get to see Cyprus (a.k.a., Josh) for another semester. He and I had had an audio class together back in college, and I am thankful for his realistic cheerfulness.

I also enjoyed some of the firsts that I was able to experience, such as the first time actually participating in a remote broadcast for a non-college radio station. Having Dennis Prager in the studio was a blast, and seeing Medved in person was a plus as well. Directing traffic at a station event was also rather new, and I certainly did not expect coming into the internship that I would get to ride with Joey in the WGTK van as we did to Plan First.

I thank the whole staff for taking the time to give me the opportunity to see the station in action (from Gallagher to Dave to Lori), as well as to know a little of what it is like to add one station to another. Yoso and Dibet were also very amiable and no doubt made and continue to make a positive contribution to the workplace atmosphere, including during the transition.

Best of wishes on your future endeavors,

Sincerely,

Zack Kendall
